Instead of shipping the live caule up Nor h. as form riv, the people are three caule up Nor h. as form riv, the people are changing their policy and packing at home. The manufacture in this city of largels for this trade is already quite an item, and is increasing very rapitle.

FUNERAL OF GEORGE PEABODY.

Thronging of the Poor at the Gates of Westminster Abbey - Conspicuous Absences-The Plain Coffin and the Cross of Cumelias A Highly Interesting Description.

[Corre pondenes of the N w York Tribun .]

LONDON, Nov. 12. It was a hard, cold, steel-colored sky that overbung Landon to-day, even until after one o'clock; but the poor of Loudon brought their rags and shivering limbs to line the path by which the cortege of George Peabody was to enter the Abbey. And surely none of the great and wealthy gentlemen who followed could doubt that there is plenty of room still left for Peabodys, and plenty of need for cond doubt that there is plenty of room still left for Peabodys, and plenty of need for their munificence. But they, perhaps, of all others would have dropped gouline tears on the breast of this bountiful friend were sturdily kept back by beadles and policemen. "None can be admitted without mour ling." This announcement on the circle of admission to the Abbey was nuderstood by the officials to refer not to pangs of the heart but bands on the hat I cannot help thinking that London woul? have witnessed a more impressive funeral of the benefactor of the poor, had it been arranged that through the crowd of gentlemen and ladies lu attendauce, all dressed in black, au assle had formed, and a procession of the poor permitattendance, all dressed in olack, an asie had formed, and a procession of the poer perintited to pass through and look linto the grave. Alas, how long it would have been! But this was not to he; so they thronged about the gates outside, giving their pennies for little mourning cards, and likenesses, and for a poor balled written by one of their number, which respectively the transport that tentures in its superior. seemed to represent their feelings in its crude and rade stanzas:

> "Oh mourn ve Biltish sons of toll, And weep ve dauchters foo; A noble heart of bonnaless wealth Hach passed away from you.

"No booming cannon loud proclaim'd When he gave no his treath; But tooling thousands they will mourn Tae day he sank in death.

"Ye sons of might ecorn not the pior Nor mock their sid distress; As this than menant brother too helleve their wretcheduess.

"May gende vinds the vessel 'end Acro's the mighty main, That hears less how y to 1 at shore Wnate liberty doch teign.

'No pempons little heralits bim; The best of tich and poor; It's simple numenflebout is To live for eventuate."

A limited space was left open to the public, ere they could at least hear the chans, and was crammed. The space open to those to had tickets was by no means crowded, nd among the dist nguished man who formed the accompanion of the corpse through the about there were, it must be confessed, conspicuous absences. Some had even expected that the Prince of Wales would have represented by mother's publicly-expressed for row of the occasion; but he was fulfilling the decrees of his position by following the horsely.

London has long been crowded with our countrymen, there is no wonder that they should have occupied so much space. Nevertheless, the nave was only half fall, and having witnessed the funeral here of Lo.d Palmerston, I could not help recognizing the immense contrast between the numbers and the distinction of those who were then present and those who did homage to the remains of George Peabody. Do the great middle and upper classes of Engl ud really in their hearts honor such humense and wholesale giv-dard he has set up for the almost fatulous wealth of this kingdom is a good one?

Old things die hard in England, yet they die. The other day, when the Queen entered die. The other day, when the Queen entered Londou to open the viaduet the crowd so chaffed the liverned footnen that the latter presently gave signs that under their plush and powder they actually had some of the sensibilities of men On Lord Mayor's day the most antique features of the show were all left out. But here at Mr Peubody's funeral—though it was by far the simplest lever saw in the Abbey—there was preserved the nutes, and the wretched juidthem to disappear.

The morning, as I had said, had been gray and gloomy, but shortly before the choristers charting, the sun shore out, and, its light being broken up by the little, square window. panes, threw a great mass of beams across the grave. Through the grand old building the light stole, caught from window to window, the harmouics and hues of the light.

The center of the nave was covered with black cloth, as was the whole area of the western end where the body was deposited, what did rein what did rein what did rein what else than to ride about the country io? Well,' concluded the questioner, giving the there was something impressive in he seeme the surroundings. Conspicuous between the country io? Well,' concluded the questioner, giving the crazy thing a heavy shake, 'I b'lave I'd called a hack first!' " and its surroundings. Conspicuous be-yond and above it was the figure of William Pitt, with lifted arm; as if his very statue were reminding his country of how his voice had defended in its struggling infacey the colory which had pro-duced this benefactor of England. Lumediately outposite the new grave was the memo-rial tablet in-cribed as raised by 'chizers of Massachusets' to Sir William Howe, who led in the stege of Bostou, and offered to the colomassactuses in the stege of Bostou, and offered to the colonies that amnesty ou condition of laying down their arms, which not all the darkness of their making a total of 1,133,000 for the week, and prospects at the time cound induce them to 27,451,531 g silons since the lirst of January.

And yet a little further on w s the constitution barges, and three brigs are now loading. accept. And yet a little further ou w s the tomb of the poor young Major Andre, whom Washlagton executed, even while he pitied Washington executed, even while he pitied him, because the right of America to be called a nation was luvolved. On this tomb is carved a representation of the capture of Andre, while one of Washingtou's staff, Andre, while one of Washingtou's staff, sitting behind him, holds his handkerchief to his eyes. All these men were the witnesses which stood around silently calling up the dragon of panperism, the prince who ruled from the heart of the people, the saint who gave men bread, the apostle who brought glad tidings to the poor; he is our brother."

But while the scene had thus some traits of nistorical impressiveness about it, it was impossible to divest it of a certain coldness. Perhaps it is impossible to have forms of this kind simple without being bold. One longed that there should have, at least, been around the coffin some tender lands to east on it some less ordered flowers than white eamelias carefully arranged into a cross, which were its only ornament. The American officials and the ladies who followed it—the families of Messra, Motley, Morgan, Sturges, and one or two others—were, of course, solemn and decorous, and could be no more. Mr. Gladstone, Arthur Phelps, Miss Coutts, almost the only people of note present, seemed impressed by the occasion; but we all experienced a certain relief in the weeping of a girl who followed the occasion; but we all experienced a certain relief in the weeping of a girl who followed aloue—the one touch of personal feeling manifested. Nor was the music altogether rendered with such full taste and feeling as I facey it would have been had bean Stanley (who had telegraphed from Italy his desire that Mr. Peabody should be buried in the Abbey) been in England. The chant to which the procession had moved toward the choir had been impress—and plaintive, but the subsequent piece were toward the choir had been hipress, and plaintive, but the subsequent prect were more intricate than sweet, and when the choristers were singing around the grave, a hundred yards distant from the organ, there pathetic cheerfulness of the eloslag passages-"His body is buried in prace But his name fly th evermers."

were a sine faults of harmony between the two.

To all this, however, the last piece sing was a notable exception. It was heautiful in itself, and was sining with a true feeling. It was the music of H indel, and the singers seemed to feel, and so made the people feel, the solt and

The other pieces consisted of two by Dr. Croft, "Thou knowest, Lord," and "I heard a soice from Heaven, "and one by Purcell, "In the midst of life" These, as I have intimated, were far from well sung, and the effect of the last was not hightened by the place occulied by the choristers near the grave, which gave rise to some strange and weird celeoes. When all was over, the or anist gave a grand reu-dearing of the "Dead March in Saul," and the crowd erept slowly past the grave whose dust of this age. On the plain coffin, with its cross of white flowers, was written:

GEORGE PEABODY, ESQ., Born 18 F ornary, 1795, Died in Lou on, 4 November, 1869.

One other comment suggests itself. The nost enthusiastic admirers of the Book of common Praver present must, I think, have elighat there are times and cases when in the nigid formula might be relaxed and some spontineous utterance allowed. The Rev. Lort John Thyme, Sabalean of Westminster, read the burial service clearly and solemnly, but how he might have thrilled the audience had he left his book for the moment and us-tered the thankfulness of the best hearts around tered the thaukfuluess of the best hearts around him that one rich man at any rate had found the nee-12's eye, and knew now to sell what he had for the noble satisfaction of surving men! For instance, how truy gloquent would at have been in this particular case had the reverend nobleman when he closed the prayer ending with "Come, ye hiessed of my Father, receive the kingdom prepares for you from he beginning of the world"—been able to add the words added in the Birle, "for I was an homogrei and ye gave me meat?"

It would in each be a great error to measure the feelings of the masses of the English people by the anothy of the weathurer classes to ple by the abothy of the weathing classes to the events of to-day. The heart of the peo-pic may be test left in the press, which takes dates of his position by following the hounds. Isan Francisco Cor. of the N. Y. Rerald.]

The coolies are not permitted to return to China or India when their original terms of service expire. They are "induced" to extend them by methods of which the following atrocity, wituessed by our informant, is a type: A few month-since a large number of the coolies were entitled to return to their homes by the expiration of their terms, but the num were in debt (as is generally the case) to the company, and would not be allowed to go. On this plantation the coolies are allowed only one mean per day, and that is given at evening. Horses are fed to them, and pigs and other animals which die of disease are saved and served out to these miserable wietches for food. Several times horse flesh was set before the Europeaus on the plantation, but they refused to partake. Everytting possible is done to keep the coolies in a condition of abject servitude, and our informant when the same the seminary was the same the seminary was the same the seminary was the same the same the same that was the same the same that was the same the same that was says no pen can adequately portray the scenes of sullering, misery, starvation, and butchery which he witnessed at different times during his residence in Tahiti. Murders are of frequent occurrence on all the plantations, and the condition of Emopeaus and coolies alike deplorable in every respect.

The whole busines of procuring coolies is in he hands or ship-owners, who caup oy agents to go about in opinm and gambing-houses and pick out such as are in debt; they advance a small sum, the men are placed on a diray old junk, and when the cargo is full, the ship sails with them to the field of their labors.

These wretched people do not generally know the length of the yoyage nor of the privators and cruelty to whice mery are sure; to be tions and ernelty to which they are sure to be subjected. Hundreds of them get homesick and commit suicide, and others, packed into vessels without sufflerent nir and exercise, expir during the voyage. Those who survive are sold to the highest bidder for a nominal term of years, and in some cases as high as $250 are paid per head for them. At the end of the services they find themselves in debt to the owners of the plantation, and must remain, being in this way subjected to perpetual slavery.

THE BIVER. For the first 115 miles from the month of the Colorado river there is a very rich valley from five to infecen miles in breadth. Here is an abundance of cottonwood, willow, ash, and mesquite—the latter produces too great a heat for the grate-bars of steam-boilers unless temperer with cottonwood. The same quality of timber extends over 500 miles up the river. The Cocopan and Yuma Indians here raise wheat, barely, corn, and melons, generally planting as the water recedes. The valley is equal, if not superior, to that of the Sacramento, California. They differ, however, in this respect: the soil of the first slopes back gradually to the base of the mountains, while the banks of the other are nighter immediately along the river. The tish in the harbor and Gulf of California are of the firest quality. In lour hours captain Truworthy and myself harmans and the same and the same received and myself harmans and the same results and myself harmans are same and myself harmans and the same results are same and myself harmans and the same results are same and myself harmans and the same results and myself harmans and myself harmans and myself harmans are same and myself harmans are same results. Above Fort Yuma, 140 miles from the mouth of the river, to a point 430 miles, numerous unconnected rich valleys are found. These are mostly occupied by the Mojave, Chimawava, and Pan-Ue Indians. These Indians raise grain, melous, &c., and cut wood for the steamers. At the M-jave valley, 350 miles from the mouth of the river, there is a miles from the mouth of the river, there is a very rich valle, extending over thirty miles in tength. Here Colonel Dent, who has had charge of the Indian agency, has succeeded in turning the water from the river upon the reservation. The amount of work he cas done by the labor of these Indians specks very much in favor of his enterprise and the practical system he has so successfully inaugurated to ward a divancing the welfare of the tribe over whom he acts. He has had much opposition from those who ought to monopolize the trade of the Indians. This opposition, so common in Arizona, is the strongest evidence in favor of any practical movement. Here to be a sucception.

AN IXTRAURDINARY STORY.

The Most Remarkable Father and [From the Carlisle (Ky.) Mercury]

A most remarkable case of consargnineous affection and sympathy is that of a father and son, living in the adjoining country of Feening. The father is about forty-five years of the son not yet twenty. When one The Most Remarkable Father and Son. age and the son not yet twenty. When one has any compaint the other is similarly affected. If the father has the headache, the fected. If the father has the headache, the son has cent the same time; if one suffers with the toothiche, the other also suffers with the toothiche, the other also suffers with it; when one gets a cold, the other gets it also; and so it goes on through all the calalogue of orditary complaints. But yet more remarkable still is the similarity of their appetites, temperaments, and general actions. What one likes and eals, we other likes and eals, and what one dislikes and won't eat, if one becomes angry, or gloomy, or happy, to the same degree and at the same time is the other avery, or gloomy, or happy. They sheeze at the same time, sleep the same time and the same number of hours, and, the most remarkable of all, they dream at the same time and the dream of one is not same as that of the other. We might go on and enumerate many other instances of the relationship existing between this eather and son, tionship existing between this tasher and son, though the above are sufficient as showing how strange and remarkable that relationship placing all other remedies for worms. Almost all of the popular worm nostrums of the day depend for their efficacy upon the Santonin which they contain; but in these i s found in varying proportions and of uncer all purity; and very often again in com olnation with other elements unknown to the physicians, and often hazardous in their

My purpose is to present to the medical profession this valuable medicine in a simple, reliable and agreeable form, in determ Ined quantities and of uniform composition To accomplish this, I have prepared these lozenges with great care, of Santonin of tested purity, very carefully distributed throughout the mass from which the Lozenges are formed The materials have been so compounded that the Lozenges will stand unaltered by time or climate. The boxes are also impervious to moisture from the atmosphere.

To give the Sautonin time for full effect up on the worms, the addition of any purgative medicine to the Lozenges has been avoided It may, therefore, be proper, two or thre hours after the administration of the secondose, to use some simple purgative for the AT 3 O'CLOCK, purpose only of discharging the worms.

These Lozenges contain only pure Sugar and pure Santonin. The only merit 1 claim is the ascertained purity of the ingredieuts, and its thorough and careful distribution, so that each Lozenge contains its e act portion of Santonin; the dose sufficiently indicating the quantity.
